Greetings From the New Dayton’s Bluff Community Council Executive Director

By Ed Lambert, Executive Director, Dayton’s Bluff Community Council.

I started in early September and began by getting oriented to the organization’s budget, programs, and history. The main thing I want to do this first month and beyond, however, is to get to know the residents and business owners of the community.

As a graduate of Harding High School, and Van Buren Elementary, I have some deep roots here. My first daughter was born at the old St. John’s Hospital; now the site of the proud and growing Metro State University Campus. A few years after high school, after a stint in the Navy, I moved to the West Metro area to attend college and begin a career as a community activist and business owner. It’s good to be back in St. Paul, my hometown, and working for a creative community organization focused on improving Dayton’s Bluff; the community I grew up in. I have great memories of exploring the bluffs, playing sports at the former Dayton’s Bluff Playground, and just being part of this remarkable neighborhood.

Most recently I have been working as a Community Development Consultant and fundraiser. Just before that I was Executive Director of the Minneapolis Consortium of Community Developers for 7 years, and a Program Manager for the Wilder Foundation for the five years before that. Much of my work has focused on small business development and affordable housing.

In the early 80s I founded, and served as President and Treasurer of, the MicroComm Corporation based in Burnsville. We made electronic energy set-back thermostats and micro-wave burglar alarms sold throughout the US until we sold the operation to a company in Morristown, Tennessee.

My focus is now on strengthening the Community Council, and working with the community to further develop and enhance Dayton’s Bluff as a safe and attractive community to live and work. The most important element to a strong and attractive community, however, is the interest and support of the residents, institutions, churches, and businesses for make-a-difference efforts at all levels. People make change, and caring people make the biggest changes for the better.

This remarkably diverse and interesting community has a lot of stunning assets, like Metropolitan State University, substantial and beautiful parks, the Mounds Theatre, dynamic small businesses, an Historic District, and a number of effective and committed organizations working to improve the community.

Every person or group becoming involved brings energy and dreams, which feed and strengthen our potential for a better future. Please participate in the October 16 Community Council Elections, and get involved with some aspect of improving the community...your involvement will make a difference…it’s what makes things better…YOU!

Come and Vote for Your Community Council Rep.

The smaller envelope, which contains the ballot, should remain unmarked. Put the ballot in the smaller envelope, put the small envelope in the larger envelope with our address on it and return it to us. The unmarked small envelope will be put in the ballot box. “The Legend of Swede Hollow” Haunted House
By Nathaniel Churchill
Something spooky is coming to the East Side! The Young Artists Initiative (“YAI”) has created a brand new Halloween attraction for the Twin Cities, inspired by the neighborhood it is located in. The organization, known for offering arts education and performance opportunities for youth on the East Side, has created a haunted house called “The Legend of Swede Hollow.” The haunted house will combine the design and construction talents of numerous theater professionals from the area as well as some of the work of the YAI students.
The haunted house will be created within First Lutheran Church located at 463 Maria Avenue, Saint Paul, MN 55106-4428 (next to Metropolitan State University). The haunted house will be unique because it will offer spooky fun for both adults and youth. On Friday and Saturday night, “The Legend of Swede Hollow Haunted House” will be geared towards scaring teenage through adults, while on Sunday the haunted house will be restructured to be family friendly. The Sunday haunted event will also feature Halloween themed projects and games for young people and their families.
The Young Artists Initiative decided to create this haunted house based on the suggestion of some of their students and thought it was a great idea. Besides providing some great scary entertainment the event serves as a fund-raiser for the YAI. All proceeds from the haunted house go to support their youth programs and scholarships.

Saint Paul Garden Club Visits Dayton’s Bluff
Saint Paul Garden Club members in the Children’s Garden outside the Swede Hollow Cafe during their visit to Dayton’s Bluff.

On September 6th Saint Paul Garden Club member Pam Nuffort brought six new Garden Club members to spend the morning learning about gardening and park projects in Dayton’s Bluff.
They spent some time with Ruth Murphy, Executive Director of the Community Design Center, who told them about their programs, which include East Side Youth Core, the Children’s Gardens, and the Salad Share.
They watched the Swede Hollow segment of “Lost Twin Cities II”, which tells what life was like in Swede Hollow from some former residents. They learned a little more about Swede Hollow Park and took a walk to the park. They were impressed with all the work on park improvements and gardening in Dayton’s Bluff. The Garden Club was very instrumental in the development of Swede Hollow Park, which became a city park in the 1970s.
The Garden Club has helped our neighborhood by volunteering and funding Dayton’s Bluff gardening and park projects over the last 30 years.

Martians Invade Mounds Theatre
Hometowne Theatre launches a new musical comedy with its presentation of “War of the Worlds: The Musical” at the Mounds Theatre this October.
The play, described as a tribute to old-time radio, features the talents of Dennis Curley, Greg Eiden, Jeffrey Goodson, Teressa Grega, Ryan Kathman, Jim Robinson and Erika Sjogren.
The show is set on the stage of a music box in 1930 and is in front of a live studio audience at the height of the 30’s and 40’s radio era.

Are the reports real, or just part of the show? Come and find out.
Performances at the Mounds Theatre will be Oct. 12 – 22, Thursday - Saturday at 7:30, Sun. at 2:00.

2nd Annual “Watch the Glow of the Setting Sun”

On Friday, October 13th come to the old Hamm’s Brewery and watch the glow of the setting sun on the red brick brewery building. Then listen to special guest Josh McKrown tell us about the research he has done on the Hamm’s Brewery. Josh is a student studying architecture at the Minneapolis Community and Technical College. Also learn about Brewery updates. The event starts at 5:00 p.m. at Swede Hollow Henge at the northern end of Swede Hollow Park.

After the sun sets the evening picnic and socializing will begin. Last year former Hamm’s employees shared stories about the brewery and working at the brewery. Joe Sanchelli, a former Swede Hollow resident, entertained everyone with Italian music and his memories of living in the Hollow.

Donations are appreciated. This is a Friends of Swede Hollow fundraiser. For more information call Karin at 651-776-0550.

St. John’s Catholic Church - 120 Years in Dayton’s Bluff

By Greg Cosimini

St. John’s Catholic Church at Fifth and Forest Streets was established in 1886. 2006 marks its 120th anniversary serving the people of Dayton’s Bluff and beyond. The following history of the parish was assembled from a number of sources and is meant to provide a brief overview of this neighborhood landmark. For a longer history and more photos, visit our website at www.stjstp.org.

First Church

In the early months of 1886, the Right Rev. John Ireland, bishop of St. Paul called in Rev. Louis Cornelis, pastor at Mendota, to look into the possibility of forming an English speaking Catholic parish on Dayton’s Bluff. Sacred Heart Church had been founded in 1882 to care for the German speaking residents of the district, but over the next decades of English speaking people coming into the neighborhood seemed to make the establishment of a separate parish for them a logical step in the growth of the diocese.

Father Cornelis reported to the bishop that the prospects were not encouraging, for most of the people on the Bluff were newcomers, poor, and too absorbed in earning a living. However, he was, nevertheless, willing to attempt the task. Parish boundaries were at once drawn up, cutting off the district at Fifth and Avenue on one hand, and Maria avenue on the other.

Undaunted by the magnitude of the task before him, the new pastor at once canvassed the Bluff for funds, and collected over which $200 was contributed by the people of the new parish.

On August 3, 1886, a lawn festival was held on the grounds at Maria Avenue and Conway Street. The grounds illuminated by hundreds of Chinese lanterns, were a colorful sight. What is more pertinent to parish history, however, large crowds attended, a substantial amount on the one hand, and Maria avenue on the other.

The parish made rapid progress during the seven years Father Fleming was pastor. In October 1887, $1,600 was borrowed for the purpose of erecting a pastoral residence, a modest frame structure flanking the church. The debt thus incurred was paid off rapidly, the more so because, as contemporary accounts tersely state, “contributions were received from unexpected sources.”

Prominent among the organizations which arose under the guiding hand of Father Fleming was the Total Abstinence Society, whose first rally was held in November 1887. Not a few of the newspaper items which have come down to us refer to the activities of this group—they packed the church to hear a lecture delivered by Father Keane of St. Thomas Seminary, they marked each of their anniversaries by elaborate programs, and carried on active work over a long period of years.

Pentecost Day, May 25, 1888, saw the celebration of the first solemn communion service in the annals of the parish. Forty boys and girls of the parish solemnly received the Sacrament on that day and were the guests of the pastor in the newly completed residence.

First School

The summer of 1888 must have been very busy. Father Fleming announced his intention of building a new school as soon as plans and specifications could be drawn up; a new high altar, in the Roman style, was ordered from J. D. Riordan; three thousand dollars were realized from a fair held at Luckey’s Hall.

Parish records of the time speak of the flourishing financial condition of St. John’s, a condition easy to understand in the light of the social affairs for the benefit of the church which followed one another in close succession. In September 1889, Father Fleming announced that plans for the school had been presented to him by J. C. McCarthy. The contractor agreed to have the building, an eight room brick and terra cotta structure, commanded the highest part of the bluff on Frances Street near Forest, completed in November. The board of directors arranged to borrow twelve thousand dollars to finance the building, which was necessary because of the increase of the student population on the Bluff.

On January 15, 1890, the formal dedication of the school took place. According to a notice in the Northwestern Chronicle for January 10, 1890, “The Rosary Society of the parish will have charge of an oyster supper which is to mark the dedication. The table runs within two blocks of the school.” At first only two rooms were used for school purposes, the entire second floor being laid out as a hall for parish functions.

Under the direction of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart, an order of teaching nuns who dressed as lay women, the school received its first pupils in February 1890, and graduated its first class the same year. In 1892 the Sisters of St. Joseph under the direction of Sister Esperance, took charge of the school.

Forty years after the erection of the school Father Fleming paid the toll which nature exacts of those who are self-sacrificing in the pursuit of their duties... he was forced by ill health to resign from his pastoral charge. The soundness of health of two years he recovered sufficiently to assume the pastorate of Shieldsville, Minnesota, where he remained until his death in February 1909.

Third Pastor

The third pastor of St. John’s, Rev. Thomas F. Gleeson, came from Newfield to the post which he was to hold for Thirty-five years. It was at this time, in September 1894, that the first assistant, Rev. Edward T. Lee, came to St. John’s. From that time on, the congregation continued to grow in size, and the services of two priests were required at all times.

Father Gleeson found in his new charge a church, a rectory and a new school, but along with these, a heavy indebtedness. The dry bones of the minutes of the corporation meetings take on living flesh when we consider the heroic way in which the little parish of some 300 families held its own during a series of trying years, and emerged, before the death of Father Gleeson in 1929, with a new church and a new rectory. Records of borrowings and mortgages, each a heavy burden in itself, pale into insignificance when we read how, bit by bit, the debts were reduced, and capital raised to carry on new endeavors.

Happy, says the history, “the ‘people whose annals are short. Happy also is the parish whose growth is so rapid that it can early settle down to that simple pattern of living, which, in retrospect, we call rectory.” He well founded that there was little to call it to the attention of the world until 1913, when Father Gleeson celebrated his silver jubilee.

On June 26, 1913, Right Rev. John J. Lawler auxiliary bishop of the diocese, and seventy-five priests gathered in the church for the solemn high mass, celebrating the silver jubilee of Father Gleeson. Following the services in the church a banquet was served to the clergy in the school hall.

This postcard, postmarked 1909, shows the original St. John’s Church, school and rectory, located on Fifth St. near Forest.

This is an interior view of St. John’s first church. When the new church was designed, many elements from this church were incorporated.
New Church
This limitation in territory seemed to increase, rather than to decrease, the enthusiasm of pastor and parishioners, and the first meeting to discuss the erection of a new church took place in 1919. The entire sum of $125,000 necessary was pledged within the parish itself, and the foundation laid in August, 1921. Work on the super structure was started in April 1922. W. T. Harris, one of the parishioners, was the architect; the builders were N. P. Fransen and Co.

On Easter Sunday, March 25, 1923, the parishioners attended their first solemn Mass in the new church. The pastor was Father Doyle, with Father Gleeson as assistant. As the parish grew in numbers, and the buildings became inadequate for the growing population of the district, Plans were submitted to Father Doyle by the firm of Slifer and Abrahamson, architects, and work was begun in July, 1931. Built with an eye to future expansion, the $150,000 Gothic brick and cut stone building is a worthy companion to the church and parish house. No feature for the comfort and convenience of those whom it is intended to serve seems to have been omitted. In the basement, extending practically two stories high, is a regulation size gymnasium, so constructed that it serves as an auditorium as well. Concrete bleachers are built in such a way as to provide storage space for chairs to be used for the auditorium. Space is provided for a regulation size handball court, locker and shower rooms for boys and girls, a lunchroom, and a Boy Scout room. At one end of the gymnasium is a stage, 31 by 44 feet, provided with footlights and other features necessary for the staging of dramatic productions. A dressing room for players is located at one end. The heating plant in the basement heats both church and school.

On the first floor are five classrooms; a kindergarten occupying space equal to two ordinary sized classrooms, with a fire-place and a playground; an office; a nurse’s room and a book room for the distribution of texts.

Seven classrooms are located on the second floor, in addition to a library, Sisters’ quarters consisting of a living room and a dining room, a parish dining room and kitchen. Many of the rooms in the building were so designed with respect to light and ventilation that seventeen classrooms would be available if needed. To assist in defraying the cost of the building a group of former pupils of St. John’s School organized a “Brick Club” and sent out a letter to all “old grads” of the school, inviting them to “Buy a Brick” in the new structure.

On January 31, 1932, the new school was formally opened to the public with an entertainment, Michael F. Kinkaid, county attorney, acting as master of ceremonies. Formal dedication of the building did not take place until April 17, 1932. At that time 500 members of the Holy Name Society formed a guard of honor for Archbishop John Gregory Murray. More than 4000 people attended the ceremonies, after which confirmation was administered to a class of 175 persons.

Father Doyle continued as pastor until 1945.

More Pastors
Rev. Edward S. de Courey became the fifth pastor of St. John’s in 1945. To this day, many people still recall his Irish temperment. On June 10, 1963, Father de Courey marked his 50th year as a priest with a special mass at St. John’s. Archbishop Benz presided. Only four months later on October 30, 1963, Father de Courey retired because of ill health.

After the retirement of Father Edward de Courey, Father Charles M. Eggert, MA., PhD., became the sixth pastor of St. John’s Church.

In 1970, St. John’s school program was consolidated with that of nearby Sacred Heart school. St. John’s school then became a middle school for several years. Because of dropping enrollment, the school was closed and the students transferred permanently to Sacred Heart School. The school building was converted for use by social agencies.

Under the direction of Father Eggert, St. John’s Church and basement were also redecorated with new carpeting and light fixtures.

Father Eggert served for 22 years at St. John’s Church, retiring in July 1986.

Father Leo Dolan was on the staff of the College of St. Thomas and was the Director of Chemical Health Education and Services from 1978 until becoming the Pastor of St. John’s Church on July 1, 1986. Rev. Dolan served as our seventh pastor until his retirement in 1993.

Rev. Joseph Fink then became the eighth pastor of St. John’s Church.

In 1995, St. John’s school program was consolidated with that of nearby Sacred Heart school. St. John’s school then became a middle school for several years. My Summer Vacation on the Road

By Karin DuPaul, Dayton’s Bluff Community Organizer

On the first Saturday of August each year we pack up and start heading west on US Highway 12. Our first stop is at Hjogi’s Grill & Smokehouse in Dassel, MN for lunch. They have wonderful food, homemade pies and outstanding sweet bread.

Then we were off to the Kavanagh family campout near Spicer, MN. 146 relatives attended this year. Sunday afternoon we started off across South Dakota on US 212 and about sunset we rolled into Gettysburg and looked around town for somewhere to spend the night. On one residential street we came across five people walking their sheep on leashes around the neighborhood. This is a first for me.

We found a room at the Gettysburg Inn, then went across the parking lot to the Medicine Rock Café for dinner. It was a large, very quaint café with a lot of local people. They had an excellent buffet and salad bar that only cost $6.99.

According to Winifred Fawcett who wrote, “The Legendary Medicine Rock”, the Café got its name because of Medicine Rock, which was located on a hill fifteen miles west of Gettysburg, near the mouth of Cheyenne Creek. For many years local Indians considered it a sacred rock and visited it regularly. In the mid 1950s the rock and building near it needed to be moved to make way for a project that would change the water flow of the creek and all rock was moved by volunteers near the site where the Medicine Rock Café building was located. Medicine Rock was moved again to the Dakota Sunset Museum in about 1989.

The next day we got to our destination, Whispering Pines Campgrounds in the Black Hills. As we were putting up our screen tent the winds started blowing and before we finished putting it up we were in the middle of a hail storm. After the storm neighboring campers came over and helped us get our screen tent up. Their party of five drove their motorcycles from their homes in the US and Germany staying at the Whispering Pines Inn, then went across the parking lot to the Whispering Pines Café for lunch. The next stop was Artichoke Lake. The next stop was Artichoke Lake. The next stop was Artichoke Lake.

Each year Mayor Mark Zeigler marries about 100 couples. Some of this information comes from the Official City of Sturgis Rally Magazine. The official attendance this year is was 456,968. (to our Peanuts characters) with about 30 buffalos throughout Custer. The Black Hills are extra beautiful when you go through them on a motorcycle. It is no wonder so many motorcycle riders go to the Black Hills each year. After visiting Sturgis a second time we all got on our motorcycles and went out to explore the Black Hills. We had a couple airplane pilots in our riding group. At times it seemed like they must have thought they were still flying their planes as we rode the hills.

One of our yearly activities is to climb Harney Peak, the highest point in America east of the Rocky Mountains. We started up the peak at around noon. On top even our cell phones worked. You can see for miles across the Black Hills, Rapid City, Bad Lands.

The Annual Sturgis Rally is planned each year by the City of Sturgis four-person Rally Department. Sturgis goes from a city of 6,500 to around 500,000 people during the Rally. Last year city crews hauled 795 tons of refuse during the rally. Most of the year Sturgis has a Police Department of 14 full-time sworn officers, three civilians, and the chief. In April each year the call goes out to officers all over the country for people interested in helping police during the Rally, one of the largest special events in the U.S. The number of officers added to the force is unclear, but 80 percent of them have worked previous rallies. Each year Mayor Mark Zeigler marries about 100 couples.

On the way back we stop to visit former Dayton’s Bluff residents Dave and Barb Gens at their new home on Artichoke Lake. The next stop was in Benson to visit Aunt Alice in the nursing home. The next thing I knew I was home and looking forward to next year.

Karin’s husband Rich DuPaul in Sturgis on a cooler-cycle, used for transporting soft drinks only, no doubt.
