Dayton’s Bluff shines at Minneapolis & Saint Paul Home Tour

Nick Duncan

On the weekend of April 25-26, hundreds of visitors from all over the region flocked to our neighborhood to visit the Dayton’s Bluff leg of the Minneapolis & Saint Paul Home Tour. The tour, in its 19th year, is designed to showcase the best of city living in Minneapolis and Saint Paul. For two days, homes of different styles and eras were open for visitors to tour in neighborhoods around the Twin Cities.

Year in and year out, Dayton’s Bluff homes have been among the tour’s most popular and beautiful attractions and 2015 was no exception. Each of the six Dayton’s Bluff homes showcased on this year’s tour saw from 200 to 750 visitors pass through their doors. The Dayton’s Bluff portion of the tour is unique in that Dayton’s Bluff includes an independent neighborhood tour running concurrently with the main tour.

Minneapolis resident Steve Nielsen has attended the home tour for many years. “This year I focused on looking at houses in Dayton’s Bluff,” Nielsen said. “Driving through the neighborhood, I was struck by how unique and different the houses on each block looked from the street.” Indeed, the neighborhood’s mix of classic Victorian and early 20th century Prairie style architecture sitting side by side is quite rare in the cities.

At Julie and Jeff Johnson’s house on 4th Street, the couple and their team of neighborhood ambassadors spent the weekend greeting over 500 guests as they entered the beautiful, fun, and eclectic home. The Johnson’s home, built in 1906, was especially popular with the crowds after its “Minnesota Room” was featured on the cover of the home tour guide book and was also featured as a location for a live local TV news morning show.

Much of the success of the Dayton’s Bluff Home Tour can be directly attributed to the leadership of Karin DuPaul who, along with Saint Paul City Planning and Economic Development (PED) employees Jane Prince and Dave Hennessey, organized the First Dayton’s Bluff Home Tour in 1996. DuPaul has been the lead organizer every year since.

New Little Free Library in the neighborhood

Forum Staff

In early May a group gathered to celebrate the presence of a new house in Dayton’s Bluff. It is located at 1125 Burns, but it houses books instead of people. It’s the newest of the “Little Free Libraries” in the neighborhood and at the time was #11,684 when it was registered.

Trudy Ohnsorg, who has lived at the address for around two years, decided it would be a fun project. She drew a sketch and worked on the project on and off for two months before it was ready. It is painted a bright purple that matches the large house behind it.

While the visitors at the event sipped lemonade and munched on cookies, a few neighbors came by and added their own books. By the end of the day, #11,684 was filled and awaiting folks to “take a book,” as the national group motto says. There are at least three other Little Free Libraries in Dayton’s Bluff—another on Burns, one on Maria and one on Bates. If you know of others let us know and we can feature them in the future. For more information on the little library movement, go to littlefreelibrary.org.

Night Out on E. 7th Street Business and Community Fair returns

Nicole Pressley
Dayton’s Bluff Community Council

Mark your calendars, Night Out on East 7th Street Business and Community Fair is happening again, Friday, August 21, from 5:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. Hosted by the Dayton’s Bluff Community Council, Night Out on East 7th Street is a free annual event where community and businesses come together for a night of food, fun, and entertainment for all ages. Families can discover the wealth of businesses and resources right in their backyards while tasting delicious local food and winning prizes.

More than just an event, Night Out on East 7th Street is a showcase of the greatness of our Dayton’s Bluff community and the work we have accomplished together. From the new businesses that filled nearly all vacancies on East 7th Street, to Friends of Swede Hollow organizers that turn that great park into a showcase for local artists at Art in the Hollow (June 6), to great craft makers at East Side Open Market; this event is a celebration of what whole communities can accomplish through engagement and partnerships.

And do we have a lot to celebrate: the growth of businesses through the Community Council’s Make It Happen on East 7th Street STAR program, a spectacular Home Tour, the new East Side Enterprise Center bringing multiple partners to advance economic development and the local food system on the East Side, and committed community groups working to keep our neighborhood strong. These shared efforts are what makes Dayton’s Bluff the happening place to live, work and play. Join us and your fellow neighbors to celebrate community at the 3rd Annual Night Out on East 7th Street Business and Community Fair on Friday, August 21.

For more information about the event, contact Nicole at nicole@dayton bluff.org or (651) 772-2075.

Forum Staff

The weather was great for the Birding Walk in Swede Hollow, Saturday, May 2. Twelve people attended the walk. Participants learned how to use binoculars and birding field guides while looking for birds. There were a many varieties of birds sighted as well as a large turtle in Swede Hollow during the walk.

At the same time, in another part of Swede Hollow, Boy Scouts practiced racing their Pine Wood Derby Cars. Many outlookers sat on the hillside watching the activities.

The Friends of Swede Hollow announced the 2015 Spring Photo Contest which began on March 21, and closes on June 19. All entries are welcome. Submit your Swede Hollow Park photo to karin@swedehollow.org.

Urban Oasis plays ball!
Urban Oasis will offer delicious and healthy craft condiments during St. Paul Saints’ games in their new ballpark at CHS Field in Lowertown.

Jacquelyn B. Fletcher
Urban Oasis

“This is a thrilling opportunity that enables us to serve our mission in a way that shows clear impact on our local economy, farmers, and food system,” says Tracy Sides, Urban Oasis founder and executive director.

“Serving healthy, locally-produced condiments gives us a reason to purchase even more produce from local, underserved farmers so we can actively expand the market for our priority growers in a real and direct way. It’s the perfect example of how the magic of food can create a healthier, more resilient, and prosperous community.”

The Urban Oasis trio of craft condiments includes: Honey mustard made with locally sourced honey, REALLY local. Some of the honey will actually come from hives (and nectar) on the East Side; sweet pepper relish from the recipe of a great-grandmother and Saint Paul restaurant owner of one of the Urban Oasis chefs; and seasonal ketchup made with fresh, local produce that’s so healthy fans can have another beer.

Vendors Urban Oasis will be sourcing ingredients from include: Big River Farms, Hmong American Farmers Association, and Shared Ground Farmers’ Cooperative.

“Our condiments will be made on the East Side nearly within pitching distance from the field. Now that’s local,” says Sides.

The St. Paul Saints’ goals of providing a uniquely Saint Paul experience for fans and families, offering healthy and delicious local food products, and building community around fun and food, align very closely with what Urban Oasis is working to do.

“By serving our locally made and sustainably produced condiments at CHS Field, which is a model of sustainable design, during games by the St. Paul Saints, our very own local, craft baseball team, we’ll be able to keep dollars in the local food system and bring greater equity and opportunities to local growers,” says Sides. “It’s a home-run for us to partner with the Saints and CHS Field.”

Art in the Hollow brings performance art, culture, and music to Swede Hollow for sixth year in a row

Karin DuPaul
Forum Staff

On Saturday, June 6, from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., the 6th Annual Art in the Hollow will again draw people from all over the region to experience art, music, and a public sculpture contest tucked within a hidden wilderness on the edge of downtown Saint Paul. The main entrance to the event is located in Swede Hollow Park, at 720 Payne Avenue.

A wide range of artists will be showcasing and demonstrating their work, including sculptors, dancers, weavers, painters, glassblowers, and photographers. Performances throughout the day will include Hmong and Native American dancers, Mexican Mariachis, R&B, and Bluegrass artists, and Hmong youth entertainers. The event is free and open to the public.

Openings are still available for artists, artisans, and performers. The fee for artists to display is $15 and tents are required. There is no fee for performers, who will be selected based on talent, variety, and local roots. Those interested in performing, displaying, demonstrating or selling their work, including sculpture, are encouraged to apply. Deadline to apply is June 1.

Many Art in the Hollow visitors enter through the old Drewry Tunnel into Swede Hollow at Beaumont, next to the Hope Community Academy School’s parking lot. Drewry Tunnel was very impressed, saying that in mind if you missed out on scheduling and a Greek Revival cottage dating back to 1879. Both properties are currently undergoing restoration.

Further down the Bluff on Mounds Boulevard, the only thing that in the Hollow will also include a temporary environmental sculpture contest. Concepts meeting safety criteria will be erected the day of the festival.

At times, the traffic jam on the little sliver of 3rd Street that is home to Daniela Bell and Eric Foster reminded one of Morelli’s parking lot during Christmas week. There was a constant flow of visitors in and out of Daniela and Eric’s impressive 1883 Victorian home. The couple had spent almost a year restoring and refurbishing the home and it looks spectacular.

From 3rd Street, a short one-block stroll north on Bates led tour attendees to two of the Saint Paul Housing and Redevelopment Authority Inspiring Communities Program’s most recent rehabs: a beautiful 1880 Italianate style cottage and a Greek Revival cottage dating back to 1879. Both properties are currently for sale. Tour attendees were very impressed with the rehabs. “Both structures captured some existing details from the late 19th century such as colorful painted exteriors, chunky moldings, high ceilings, and great hardwood floors inside,” he said. “I could picture myself living in either one.”

Like every year, each of the homes on the tour were worth viewing and represented Dayton’s Bluff living in its most positive light. By the end of the weekend, many people who barely knew Dayton’s Bluff existed left our neighborhood very impressed.

April 2016 will mark the 20th anniversary of the home tour. Keep that in mind if you missed out on this year’s tour or volunteer to be a neighborhood ambassador, it’s never too soon to contact Karin DuPaul at (651) 776-0550.

A delegate’s experience at the 2015 DFL City Convention

Jennifer Herman
Forum Staff

In our April edition, Tim Herman recounted his first experience at the precinct caucus and ward convention (see article, “One vote matters: the fascinating caucus and convention process.”) This month, he shares his experience as a delegate at the city DFL convention on April 19. The city convention process was very similar to the ward convention but the focus was on nominating school board candidates. The rules were read, candidates spoke, and there were a series of ballots in which candidates were eliminated or endorsed. At the end of the day, delegates endorsed Zuki Ellis, Steve Marchese, Jon Schultz, and Mary Van derwert. One part of the process that was new to Herman was voting for resolutions. Resolutions were presented and approved by delegates at some of the other ward conventions. All of these resolutions were read at the city convention and presented to the city delegates for vote. The votes on the resolutions were tallied by volunteers after the convention and it was just announced that 18 resolutions passed with the needed 60 percent of votes. These resolutions become part of the official City of St. Paul DFL platform which all DFL candidates should support. To read the approved resolutions visit the DFL website: https://stpauldfl.wordpress.com/author/stpaul dfl/.

In reflecting on the experience, Herman says it was interesting to watch as deals were made and alliances were created while the political process played out right in front of him. While he felt better informed about the school board candidates, he wishes the DFL had made more of an effort to give him access to the proposed resolutions so he could have reviewed them and been more informed about them before the vote at the convention. Though it was exciting to see how critical his one vote was at both conventions, he left the experience concerned that in our heavily DFL city candidates are essentially elected through the nominating process where only a few hundred residents are allowed the privilege of being delegates. By the end, he began to understand those who push for non-endorsements so that all candidates can be on the November ballots when all voters get the chance to choose.

I love chicken, don’t you? Baked with a side of boiled potatoes, fried over the grill with spicy barbecue sauce, or running around the backyard pecking for worms. Backyard Worms? In Dayton’s Bluff? Yes, that’s sooo Asian of you!” I couldn’t think of a higher compliment.

Helen and Eleanor are actually less work than our other pets. They’re very self-sufficient, and they eat almost anything, including table scraps. They even eat chicken, which at first stirred some cosmological contemplation. We adopted her on the spot. We were in business.

My housemate, Wanda, and I didn’t set out to be chicken farmers. We already had a dog and two cats, typical urban pets. But one day, a stray chicken wandered into our neighbor’s yard. We’ve seen feral chickens before during walks at Mounds Park. The neighbor kept the stray chicken in a rabbit hutch until she figured out what to do with it. We adopted her on the spot. We had an enclosed and unused kennel under the eave of our garage. A bag or two of cedar shavings and chicken feed, and we were in business.

The City of St. Paul requires chicken owners to purchase an annual permit after acquiring at least 75 percent approval of all immediate neighbors.

‘Disrespected’ is the word being heard on the street and among patrons of the Dayton’s Bluff branch of the Saint Paul Public Library and the Metropolitan State University Library. Word is that the Saint Paul Public Li- brary (SPLL) is once again yanking the manager from our neighborhood public library branch; I believe this will be the fourth since the library opened.

We’ve had some great managers and we are losing our latest—not because she wants to go, but because our Dayton’s Bluff Library, I’ve gleaned, is a training ground. I’m not sure what SPLL promotions entail, or how the structures of Librarian I, Manager, etc., work. I do know that filling the manager position with someone who invests the amount of time and talent I have seen Kathleen Herman’s impassioned article supporting the Dominion senior housing development, now underway at 720 East 7th Street.

These are exciting times for Dayton’s Bluff. All of us are thrilled there will be millions of dollars in economic development, which will provide hundreds of construction jobs right here on our Bluff. As has always been the case in Dayton’s Bluff, residents have played a key role in making this a place where their desire is to restore the neighborhood and reside in beautiful historic homes. It is also a place where diverse businesses and institutions like Metropolitan State University and CLUES want to locate.

A case in point is the development of Mississippi Market, which resulted from scores of entering East Side neigh- borhood joining forces to form a food co-op. Once Gateway Coop had sold 200 membership- ship shares, Mississippi Market was con- vinced that it could build its first East Side store on the Hospital Linen site. Mississippi Market came ready to build needing no public subsidy to develop this beautiful facility and expand our city’s base.

Unfortunately, SPPL sees fit to use this socioeconomic- ally challenged community as a training ground. Great for the initiates! Metropolitan State University wisely and generously provides complementary funding, staff, and programming to benefit our East Side community, bringing people of many ethnic and economic back- grounds together. However, this revolving door hinders the opportunity to build strong partnerships between in- stitutions. The library is where reduced tensions and af- fability are strongly evident. We see our social capital flowing in our well-used public library. Our social capi- tal is strong largely because of the investment in conti- nuity, planning, commitment, and community organiza- tion of our SPPL Dayton’s Bluff branch man- ager. Why weaken this by treating it as a training ground? Why weaken this partnership by removing a branch manager who has proven her competence and commit- ment to serving this community?

Kathleen, our present manager, may not see herself wearing the title of community organizer or com-

‘Disrespected’ is the word being heard on the street and among patrons of the Dayton’s Bluff branch of the Saint Paul Public Library and the Metropolitan State University Library. Word is that the Saint Paul Public Li- brary (SPLL) is once again yanking the manager from our neighborhood public library branch; I believe this will be the fourth since the library opened.

We’ve had some great managers and we are losing our latest—not because she wants to go, but because our Dayton’s Bluff Library, I’ve gleaned, is a training ground. I’m not sure what SPLL promotions entail, or how the structures of Librarian I, Manager, etc., work. I do know that filling the manager position with someone who invests the amount of time and talent I have seen Kathleen Conger and previous managers offer (the strong community connections they make with youth, and the trust they build in their relationships with adults striving to enter the job market, learn English, hone par- enting skills; all the qualities that make our neighbor-hood stronger and heighten the quality of life, is no small task). Yet, just as a child is snatched away from a healthy foster family, so our library’s manager is once again snatched away from the healthy library family she has worked to develop.

Unfortunately, SPLL sees fit to use this socioeconomically challenged community as a training ground. Great for the initiates! Metropolitan State University wisely and generously provides complementary funding, staff, and programming to benefit our East Side community, bringing people of many ethnic and economic back- grounds together. However, this revolving door hinders the opportunity to build strong partnerships between in- stitutions. The library is where reduced tensions and af- fability are strongly evident. We see our social capital flowing in our well-used public library. Our social capi- tal is strong largely because of the investment in conti- nuity, planning, commitment, and community organiza- tion of our SPLL Dayton’s Bluff branch man- ager. Why weaken this by treating it as a training ground? Why weaken this partnership by removing a branch manager who has proven her competence and commit- ment to serving this community?

Kathleen, our present manager, may not see herself wearing the title of community organizer or com-

ART IN THE HOLLOW 2015

Swede Hollow Park

Saturday June 6, 2015 from 10 am to 5pm

Join me for the Sixth Annual ART IN THE HOLLOW on Saturday, June 6th 2015. ART IN THE HOLLOW is the only art fair on the East Side. This unique event is an amazing show case of the wonderful art and culture we have in Saint Paul. Registration for artists is still open at www.artinthehollow.org

There are over 50 visual & performing artists anticipated to show off their amazing works. Many of them will be creating works on site, including glass mosaics, murals, sculptures, and painted furniture. Plein air (open-air) painters will seek to capture the beauty of the deep, lush ravine, with its ponds and stream, its variety of flora and fauna.

This year there will be a sculpture installation contest, a teen gallery, children’s art area, and the Swede Hollow history booth.

Come join your neighbors and local artists for an afternoon of fun!

First, a few random events picked out of St. Paul newspapers. The DeLuxe Theatre opened in 1915 at 287 Maria with a capacity of 393 seats. There were several small theaters in the area. The DeLuxe Theatre closed in 1950, but the building is still there, now home to Eagles Aerie No. 33. The present church building of Bethlehem Lutheran Church, at Forest and Margaret, was completed and dedicated on October 10, 1915. Its architect was Emanuel L. Masqueray, who also designed the Cathedral of St. Paul.

In the nearby Railroad Island neighborhood, the grandfather of Jimmy Burger’s family moved his grocery store that is now located on Payne Avenue. Warren Burger’s family moved into a home at 695 Conway a century ago. The future Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court went to Van Buren Elementary, today’s Dayton’s Bluff School, and then graduated from Johnson High School. He lived at the Conway address until 1933.

The pipe organ of St. John Evangelical Lutheran Church, located at 765 Margaret Street, was considered one of the finest in the region and dates back to 1915. It was installed by the Wirsching Organ Co. of Salem, Ohio, and extensive repairs and upgrades were made to the instrument in 2004.

On June 5, 1915, 20 ½ acres of land across from today’s Obb’s Sports Bar and Grill was signed over by the State Fish Hatchery to the city. This was the origin of the St. Paul Municipal Forest. At this time a man named George W. Rodenberg was the State Representative for Dayton’s Bluff, where he and his family resided. A short bio in a state handbook said he was in the insurance business. It reviewed some of his votes, recording that he was against prohibition, suffrage for women, and other reforms. Rodenberg authored a bill to make all patent medicines to show their contents on the label and another bill to require semi-monthly paydays. He opposed the Elwell Road Law and the Guilford amendment, but I currently have no idea what they were. Do any readers know?

There was news about the neighborhood schools. In June 1915, nineteenth eighth-grade march was played. Three decades earlier, the couple had taken their honeymoon on a steamboat trip to St. Louis. Others were sad. Such was the story of Mr. and Mrs. Flynn of 963 East Fourth Street. Their nine-year-old son Raymond was missing and they searched for him through the night. They finally found him, but discovered his body in the city hospital. He had died in an automobile accident on West Seventh Street. For some reason he asked for a ride in the Andrew Schoch Grocery delivery wagon, but the wagon was struck by a streetcar. The owners of the store lived in Dayton’s Bluff.

Sometimes people say act locally and think globally, or is it the other way around? A June paper reported a local institution that was thinking about the development of world issues. World War I had begun in Europe during 1914 and some of the battles were on the ocean; German U-boats sunk many ships. The Volkszeitung, a German-language daily that was published by a Dayton’s Bluff family, was trying to keep the United States out of the European conflict following the sinking of the Lusitania, which had Americans on board the doomed ship.

In a June 2, 1915, editorial, the Volkszeitung claimed that the German government desired to maintain friendly relations and that not one out of 10,000 Americans wanted war with Germany. The paper stated, “That a few Americans foolishly and recklessly took passage on an English ship bearing arms and munitions destined for one of the beligerents and that anti-German feelings were being fueled by the ‘American jingo press.’” In the end, the sinking of the Lusitania was one of the important events that finally led President Woodrow Wilson to lead the country into “The Great War” in Europe, as it was once called.
East Side Eating – Trimble’s Taste Trek

Forum contributor Steve Trimble is attempting to eat at every sit-down restaurant on the East Side in 2015 (chain restaurants will only be included if they are small and local). He hopes to get the word out to the Dayton’s Bluff community about the eating options here on our side of town. Steve isn’t going to pretend to be a food critic, but will give readers a little insider knowledge about the experience of eating at each place. A longer version of each month’s article is available at daytonsbluffdistrictforum.org. Click on “East Side Eating” on the top of the home page.

March 17, 2015: I decided to celebrate St. Patrick’s Day by going out to eat. Knowing that the later hours of this particular time can get a little rowdy, it might be best to show up for lunch. Of course I wanted to get corned beef and cabbage, so I had to do some research to see who was serving this traditional Irish fare on the East Side. I decided to invite Mike, Tony, and Frank to join me, since none of them had ever been to Governors and they needed to have an East Side experience. The corned beef and cabbage came with potatoes and as a special treat, a piece of Irish soda bread. Oh, and I did have one beer.

The restaurant has been around for a long time. A sign on the front says “Since 1967,” but there has been a bar here since the end of Prohibition under different names. When current owner Lou Lentsch named his new venture, he and many of the patrons were graduates of Johnson High School, whose nickname was “The Governors.” The charity for the pull tab booth still goes to the school’s hockey team.

The décor has the flavor of an older style eatery. The building is divided into two basic sections: a dining area with booths and tables, and a horseshoe bar area with around thirty stools. There is also a banquet room that can serve groups from fifteen to 150.

They hold an old-time meat raffle every Thursday and karaoke on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. They have sandwiches, appetizers, burgers, and a classic “sloppy hot dog.” Popular items at Governors include garlic toast, “famous cheese bread,” clam or smelt, chicken Parmesan dinner, and prime rib dinner. They offer a small children’s menu, as well as a Friday fish fry throughout the year.
